

FIG. 188.—Dichlorethylsulphide conjunctivitis four weeks after exposure to vapor. In the acute stage there was extreme photophobia, lacrymation, pain, edema, and purulent exudation. The residual congestion and seropurulent exudation are still evident